Trapped by Addiction: Finding the Way Out

Escape from the destructive effects of addiction can seem impossible to children and families trapped by alcohol abuse, addiction to prescription medications, and illegal drug use.

Conference Overview

Addiction has often been described by those afflicted as a “personal hell.” Inevitably, the disease of addiction expands its destructiveness to families, and to the many environments where addicted individuals live their lives—the classroom, the church, the neighborhood, the workplace, and beyond.

Whether or not the addiction is being addressed professionally, a multitude of healing strategies are available to those who interact with people struggling with addiction. The conference will assist those in the helping professions to better understand the mechanisms that lead to and sustain addiction. Attendees will learn methods to manage the damaging “fallout” that accompanies the disease.

Financial, emotional, physical, and a myriad of other consequences combine to destroy otherwise productive, joyful lives when addiction has intruded. Professional help is always appropriate, but skillfully supporting and encouraging recovery can make a profound difference.
